

LITERARY LETTERS, MANUSCRIPTS AND PORTRAITS COLLECTION

Dates of creation:

1784 – 1974

Physical description:

.9 m of textual records and graphic materials.

Scope and content:

The Osborne Collection is home to a number of letters, manuscripts and portraits pertaining to literary figures of the 18th to the 20th centuries and the education of children. Letters range from single brief notes to correspondence over several years. Some have been tipped into copies of books. The collection contains manuscript material, including legal documents, a list of books from a 19th century school-room, and receipts for the sale of copyright. A collection of images including etchings, lithographs and photographs of literary figures, is also included.

The collection has been arranged by the archivist into three series:

1. Letters
2. Manuscripts
3. Portraits

Immediate source of acquisitions: The material has accumulated through the years through gifts and purchases. Information on provenance is available on request.

SERIES ONE: LETTERS

Dates of creation:

1784-1974

Physical description:

.7 m of textual records

Scope and content:

Series contains cards and letters written by literary figures important in the world of children's literature. In three cases, Marshall Saunders, Charles Welsh, and J.R.R. Tolkien, letters have been written to these authors. The letters range widely in length and significance but in most cases they illuminate something about the personality or career of the writer. Material sent as enclosure have been left with the letters. In a number of cases both writer and recipient are important figures (Walter Crane to Edmund Evans, Randolph Caldecott to Kate Greenaway, George Cruikshank to George Routledge, and others).

The series has been arranged by the archivist in an alphabetical sequence by author.
